ECOSOC Youth Forum Conclude:

Inclusion of Young People in National Decision-making Reoccurring Theme

The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) of United Nations organized the Youth Forum with the theme 'Inclusion of Young People in National Decision-making', concluded on 3 June 2014 in New York.

The Member States of Council welcomed a proposal to incorporate youth-focused target areas in the post-2015 development agenda.

Ahmad Alhendawi, the United Nations Secretary-General's Envoy on Youth, presented the document "The Global Youth Call," which he said intended to provide concrete language on youth issues. "Any new development agenda should mainstream youth," he said, expressing hope that the youth-focused targets would be relevant to intergovernmental negotiations on the post-2015 development framework.

The document covers the top five thematic priorities of youth: education, employment and entrepreneurship, health, good governance, and peace and stability. It asks for inclusion in the post-2015 development agenda of such targets as: ensuring universal access to quality primary and post-primary education; reducing the number of youth not in employment; ensuring young people's meaningful and inclusive participation in decision-making processes, governance and peace building; improving the physical, social and mental health of adolescents and youth; and eliminating all forms of violence and discrimination against adolescents and youth.

The keynote address given by Lloyd Russell-Moyle, Vice-President, European Youth Forum describe that, there were risks globally that led to a lack of belief. Belief alone was not enough, and youth, Governments and all other stakeholders must come together to act. Describing how United Nations processes could lack transparency, he said that wealthy States participating in the 1992 Earth Summit had gotten away with what they wanted, but after that the "microphones were cut off for youth". The Millennium Declaration mentioned young people only once. Over the years, young people's tactics had changed, but their struggles to be heard must continue.

Skills Training of Youth will Boost India's GDP: WTO

Increasing female participation in labour force can also make a big impact on growth, says working paper

India may squander the opportunity of having a young population of those below 35 years of age if it fails to impart employable skills to them at a faster pace, the World Trade Organization (WTO) has said. Sixty-five percent of India's 1.2 billion people are below the age of 35 years, according to the 2011 Census. While the demographic effect will increase or lower gross domestic product (GDP) by barely one percentage point in 2035, GDP levels can increase by about 3 percentage points in 2035 if India improves significantly on skill training, according to the WTO working paper.

"Increasing female participation in the labour force can make a similarly big impact, particularly in India and the Middle East and North Africa, where a lack of improvement would decrease GDP in 2035 by around 4 percentage points, compared with the reference case (which is 1980-2010)," it said. Higher capital mobility will also benefit developing countries such as India. (LiveMint)
