

ASPIRING MINDS DISTINGUISHED PANEL OF ADVISORS

Prof. Tarun Khanna,
Harvard Business School

Prof. Khanna is a faculty at the Harvard Business School where he studies, and works with, multinational and indigenous companies and investors in emerging markets worldwide. His current research focuses on understanding the drivers of entrepreneurship worldwide. He has served as course head of the required Strategy course in the Harvard MBA program, and chaired the executive education program on Strategy, Leadership &

Governance.

He has been a frequent commentator on 'Competing in, and from, China and India' and 'Building the Developing country Multinational' on several TV and radio programs recently (NPR, BBC, CNN, CNBC, Voice of America, Bloomberg and local channels). In 2007, he was nominated to be a Young Global Leader (under 40) by the World Economic Forum.

Dr. Una-May O'Reilly
Massachusetts Institute of Technology, USA

A Principal Research Scientist at Computer Science & AI Lab at MIT. Her research interests are in artificial intelligence and development and application of evolutionary algorithms in tandem with convex optimization and machine learning techniques for problems within the realms of computer systems, networks, circuits, embedded systems and parallel high-performance systems. In 2004 she was elected a Fellow of the International Society of Genetic and Evolutionary Computation, now ACM-SigEvo. She is an associate editor of Genetic Programming and Evolvable Machines, on the editorial board of Evolutionary Computation,

Prof. Vijay Bhushan,
Ph.D., UIUC, USA

Prof. Bhushan served as the Founder Head of Department of Computer Science, Delhi University is credited with the creation of the MCA program. He has an illustrious and varied career as author of several computer book series, implementation of large-scale computer education programs at various government and private schools, initiation of robotic education in schools in India, etc. With an illustrious career of over 30 yrs in education, he has been advising multiple MCA, MBA colleges both government and private for the last 10 years.